For the bicentenary of Napoleon I's death on 5 May 2021, the musée de l'Armée and the Fondation Napoléon are joining forces to launch an international appeal to help restore, at the Hôtel National des Invalides, the monuments associated with the Emperor and his brothers Joseph, King of Naples and later of Spain, and Jerome, King of Westphalia and later Governor of Les Invalides.

As this historic monument has gone for a century without restoration and shows the signs of wear and tear typical for a site receiving more than a million visitors a year, it is now crucial that repairs are carried out. To achieve our ambitious goal in time for the bicentenary in 2021 we need your support.

WHAT WORK NEEDS TO BE DONE?

The Restoration of the tomb of the Emperor

Completed in 1862, the majestic tomb of red quartzite receives ongoing maintenance by the musée de l'Armée. Although its general condition is satisfactory, time has taken its toll and here is what's needed:

- The restoration of the floor: several parts of the stone, enamel and marble inlay were damaged by pieces of masonry falling from the Dome above, which itself has since been repaired.
- Renewing the gilding of the inscription, over the entrance to the crypt, "Je désire que mes Cendres reposent sur les bords de la Seine, au milieu de ce peuple français que j'ai tant aimé" ("I wish that my mortal remains may repose on the banks of the Seine, surrounded by the French people that I loved so much").
- The meticulous cleaning of the tombstones of Generals Duroc and Bertrand, of the funeral genies which "guard" the crypt entrance, and more generally, of all the statues and other decorative elements.
- The consolidation of all the floors around the tomb itself: the circular marble and enamelled floor:

The Restoration of the other Napoleonic Monuments

- King Joseph's Tomb: this tomb (1862) is currently open to the public and needs a thorough cleaning.
- King Jerome's Tomb: this tomb (1860) has been inaccessible to the public for several years and needs the same attention as that of his brother Joseph. It is located in the 'Chapelle Saint-Jérôme', which is where the Emperor's mortal remains were laid to rest when they were first brought back to France in 1840. After restoration work, the chapel will be reopened to the public.
- The Chapelle Napoléon: in the Église des Soldats served as the second chapel of rest for Napoleon's mortal remains while the Dome Church was undergoing construction work. The chapel has only rarely been open to the public, and its decor is virtually unchanged. There are also several paintings depicting the return of Napoleon's mortal remains, which, along with the rest of the furniture, will be included in the chapel's restoration.

• The tomb slabs from St Helena in "le Jardin de l'Intendant": When the French expedition undertaken by the Comte de Rohan-Chabaud and the Prince de Joinville brought back the Emperor's mortal remains from St Helena in 1840, they also brought with them the heavy stones which had covered the Tomb on St Helena, the first burial site of the Emperor: There are four of these stone slabs: one had been buried underground, resting directly above the coffins (which were themselves placed one inside another); the other three slabs, at ground level, were visible to visitors. For many years they were displayed in the "Chapelle Napoléon" part of the Eglise des Soldats, but in the 1970s, these stone slabs were transferred to the "Jardin de l'Intendant", a small garden adjacent to the cathedral.

The plan is to clean and protect the stones, and also to improve their appearance with a new landscape design, lighting, as well as installing new media tools, all of which will facilitate public visits, weather-permitting.

WHY DONATE?

By helping to restore the Emperor's last resting place and the other monuments which surround it, you can play a key role in the preservation of a great monument symbolic of France's historic and artistic heritage.

The restoration and refurbishment of these monuments will be part of a larger "Napoleon Season", in 2021, which will include a major exhibition, concerts, talks and many other events. What's more, all of this will be open to the public.
